ROPING DIVISION

The Roping Division features the best female ropers in the WPRA competing in team roping (header and heeler), tie-down roping and breakaway roping. World titles are awarded in each division as well as in the all-around category in which a competitor competes in more than one event winning more money than the rest of the field.

Sporting a small but loyal membership (that is currently growing in numbers and events), the women of the Roping Division have the opportunity to compete at events all over the United States in search of a world title.

Standings, based on money won at the approved and co-approved events, are kept just like they are in the barrel racing division. At the end of the year, the WPRA hosts a World Finals featuring top competitors from each of the roping events that gives each competitor one last chance to win enough money to capture a world title.

This section features the 2014 World Champions as well as listings of past champions not only in the roping events but in the roughstock events of bareback riding and bull riding, when that was offered through the WPRA.

Crawford Collects Three Roping World Titles in 2014 - Breakaway, Tie-down and Team Roping Heading

By Jolee Lautaret-Jordan

It looks like the honeymoon will just stay on hold for now.

That's what happens when two of the world's top ropers get married. Jackie Hobbs tied the knot with Charly Crawford last December, about six weeks removed from earning nearly $8,000 at the WPRA World Finals and collecting her ninth and tenth WPRA World Championships.

Meanwhile, Crawford had just concluded his seventh trip to Las Vegas for the Wrangler National Finals Rodeo, winning better than $51,000 including two go round wins.

Because rodeo has no off-season, the couple celebrated a small ceremony during the Christmas holidays and then set right back to doing what they both do best: rope.

"Maybe someday we'll go on our honeymoon," laughs Crawford, "but I won't hold my breath."

The cowgirl has good reason to doubt any vacation is in the offing. While Charly travels hard down the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association (PRCA) trail, Crawford herself stays busy with a full competition schedule and with teaching others the fundamentals of roping.

And she constantly sets – and achieves – new goals for herself.

As the 2014 season dawned, one of those goals was a WPRA World title in the breakaway roping. With five All Arouds, four tie down roping and one heading title, the breakaway roping was feeling a bit like the one that got away.

"I set it out as a goal, and wrote it down," says the ever-driven Crawford. She had come oh-so-close in the past, losing to Hope Thompson a year ago by just $93. She was the reserve champion in 2012 as well as 2009, when the difference was just under $500.

"I tried to concentrate on the breakaway and go to as many events as possible," says Crawford who hit events such as the Kari Burns Memorial in Billings, Mont., Wyoming's Richest All Girl Roping in Buffalo and co-approved Texas Cowboys Rodeo Association (TCRA) events. She came into the 2014 WPRA World Finals in Waco, Texas ranked first, holding a lead of just about $3,000 over Kelsie Chace. Ironically, Chace lives with the Crawfords and helps Jackie with her horses and clinics.

Though she failed to cash a single check in Waco, Crawford's lead proved insurmountable. With $13,087 in season earnings, she held off Chace to claim her first breakaway world title.

"It was kind of a relief to finally win it," Crawford admits. "The breakaway is probably my favorite event; it's so competitive and you're always roping against the best out there."

"It was the most special one to win."

Since joining the WPRA in 2006 and winning the Tie Down Roping Rookie of the Year, Crawford has never finished lower than second in the average at the WPRA World Finals and has only been beaten twice for the World Championship in that event.

Just as she did in the breakaway roping, Crawford took the lead in the tie down roping for 2014 with a win at the WPRA World Finals Kick-off event for the new season. She won both events in October 2013 to jump start the year.

Crawford cashed checks at Joe's Boot Shop Roping in Clovis, New Mexico along with the Ultimate Calf Roping/Rafter L event in Glen Rose, Texas, to push her lead out to $400 ahead of Wyoming cowgirl Donene Taylor as the WPRA World Finals began.

At the Finals, Crawford picked up a pair of round wins, placed in the other two rounds, and finished second to Krista Johnson by four tenths of a second in the average. Picking up $1,694 at the Finals, Crawford held off Johnson by just $457 to clinch her fifth WPRA World title in the tie down roping. She won $2,780.

For both events, Crawford called upon T-boy, the nine-year old gelding who is registered DS Sassy Shiner. The gelding is one of many that Crawford has trained over the years.

For the team roping, Crawford borrowed her husband's good horse, Bullseye, to head for 2013 WPRA World Champion Heeler Ashley Mills and rode her tough horse Steely to heel for Chace.

"I was going back and forth between head horses but we decided I should go with a veteran since I had a chance to win a lot of money [at the World Finals]," Crawford says. Along with Chace, the Crawfords keep nearly two dozen horses in training at a time.

"There is no such thing," she laughs when asked what a typical day at their Stephenville home is like. "Ideally, we will get up, work out, and start riding. We'll ride as many colts as we can and still try to make sure we are getting plenty of practice. Then someone always seems to stop by and want a little help or a lesson, so we do that too."

Adding to the workload, the Crawfords are busying building their place. Crawford hopes to use it for clinics in the future, reducing the time spent on the road.

"I have big plans for our place," she says, noting that the couple recently did a clinic in Kentucky with one of their sponsors, Lubrisyn. “Our clinics have been huge but I’m hoping to put on a lot of clinics [at home].”

During the team roping in Waco, Crawford won a round with Mills. She picked up another heading check in a go and earned a round check along with sixth in the average heeling for Chace as well. Her total earnings in the team roping were $1,569.

Crawford had cinched her second title in the heading before ever turning a steer in Waco. She won $12,720 for her second win at the prestigious Wildfire Ladies Open Roping in Salado, Texas back in February. As she did in 2011, she won with Annette Stahl who claimed the 2014 WPRA World title in the heeling.

Crawford’s season total of $14,231 was almost $5,000 ahead of 2013 WPRA World Champion Header Lari Dee Guy. In the heeling, she finished seventh.

“I didn’t have a great Finals,” Crawford notes. She earned $3,263 while in Waco, a fair finish but not what she’s accustomed to accomplishing. She finished just $509 behind Guy for the All Around Championship, just the second time she’s been beaten for that title since 2008. “It wasn’t everything I had wanted.”

“We’ve been so busy working on other things,” she adds, “that I wasn’t really getting enough practice.”

“When you let yourself slip a bit like that, you’ll notice it quick [in competition]. That’s what re-motivates you,” she explained when asked what keeps her driving forward with everything she has won.

Now a 13-time WPRA World Champ, Crawford seems just as determined as she was back before she’d won the first one. She has her sights set on more wins at the big all-women’s ropings and maybe even another step.

“Before we have kids, Charly would like me to rope at the big pro rodeos, like Salinas and Cheyenne Frontier Days. He has kind of pushed me to get my [PRCA] permit filled so I can do that,” she says. Crawford has already proven she can compete at the highest level: in 2014 she earned a spot in the Semi-Finals for RFD-TV’s The American in the team roping, the only woman to do so.

“That was definitely one of my highlights for the year,” she says. “It was my first open roping and we won fourth against over one hundred teams. It was pretty cool.”

In the meantime, Crawford will split time this December between roping in the World Series of Team Roping Finals at the South Point in Las Vegas and watching Charly compete at his eighth Wrangler NFR.

“It’s going to be a disaster,” she jokes, noting not only time spent in competition but also numerous sponsors commitments during the 10 days. Crawford is sponsored by Ariat, Classic Ropes and Classic Equine, Rattler Ropes, Lubrisyn, Easy Now Shock Absorber and Total Equine.

“It’s been a very good year,” she says. “I have to thank my husband . . . he is so supportive. He is always telling me to push myself to get better every day.”

Guy wins first world all-around championship

By Julie Mankin

If it surprises you that Lari Dee Guy had never won a world all-around championship in the WPRA until now, it should.

No other female roper has recorded more victories catching calves, horns and heels than Guy, who cracked out as a 9-year-old winning 11 consecutive world championships in the American Junior Rodeo Association, followed that up with two national college rodeo championships and embarked on a 20-year-career winning every major all-women's jackpot in all three events.

The fact is, the Abilene, Texas cowgirl became a clinician and horse trainer, and didn't venture to any WPRA events until about seven years ago. Since Guy did start hitting the all-women's rodeos, she has become a two-time world champion breakaway roper (2008 and 2010); a two-time world champion heeler (2010-11) and a world champion header (2013).

But she'd never earned the all-around title until 2014 – and was plenty surprised by it.

"When my mom and dad asked if they should reserve a room in Waco to come watch, I told them I wasn't likely to win any championships, so not to worry about it," she said.

But in Waco, she broke the ice by winning the kick-off roping heading for Annette Stahl, then wrapped up four rounds of World Finals action by placing second in the average in breakaway, second in heeling (for Hope Thompson) and fourth in heading (for Stahl). All totaled, her checks came to $5,253.

"After the rodeo, I was hanging out with some friends in the trailer and I got a couple of texts saying 'great job' and 'congratulations,'" Guy said. "I was like, 'Hmm.

Thanks?' About the third time it happened, I looked at the girls and I'm like, "Did I win something? What did I do?"

Guy had a feeling she may have won the all-around for the Finals itself, but everyone was acting strange.

"Hope is friends with the secretary and I told her, 'You don't lie to me; what did I do?' and they go to smiling and I go to thinking, and I figured out I must have won the all-around for the year. I got kind of excited."

Guy's stellar performance at the Finals helped her edge Jackie Crawford by just over $500 for the year-end championship. Throughout the Finals, Crawford had been placing right along with Guy, taking home go-round and average money in tie-down roping, heeling and heading.

"Honestly, I'd rather have beat her in the heading and she would have won the all-around," Guy said. "She competes in all four events and she's won it a bunch. I felt like a spoiler."

Truth is, Guy didn't think she could beat "those kids" in the all-around. But heck, she taught most of them everything she knows.

"I was 30-something and had already quit tie-down roping when I started going to WPRA rodeos," said Guy, who had the first of two back surgeries directly out of college. "All the girls I helped and hauled with tie-down roped, so it was never even a thought for me to win this, especially at 43.”

In Waco, Guy won saddles, buckles, spurs and “a lot of really neat awards” that included Back On Track boots, 5-Star pads, winter blankets and more. She got in a little hot water with her proud parents, who ribbed her about how she had said she wasn’t expecting to win much.

“This championship meant a lot to me; beating some of the girls I beat there to win it,” said Guy. “I was kind of struggling with vertigo at the Finals. I thought I might win the heading average, but I had kind of quit heeling in recent years. I ended up heeling good in Waco – we even won the World Series qualifier afterward. It just all worked out in my favor.”

Guy said she had kind of “sold herself afoot” in heel horses and didn’t have a good one to ride, so she borrowed Trooper, the horse she sold after having won events like the Windy Ryon and Wildfire on him.

“I haven’t had a good heel horse for a while,” said Guy, rated as a #6 header and heeler in the TRIAD system. “There are getting to be some girls who heel really well, and basically head horses bring so much more money. But now I’ll have to go to heeling since I have a run with Hope next December in Las Vegas. And I don’t make many calf horses anymore, but I’ll train some here and there just because so few people are doing it.”

In breakaway, it was her first rodeo back on Gangster, who had been off for a year and a half following a tendon injury. And in heading, Guy nearly won the average on Tombstone, a 5-year-old colt she’d been forced to turn to when Gangster had gotten hurt. She breakaway roped and headed on the youngster all season.

In fact, maybe if Guy hadn’t trained such nice horses, she wouldn’t have trounced the competition so handily. The veteran might see herself as a spoiler, but Guy proved in October that she’s actually still the toughest cowgirl to out-rope in any event, any day.

Stahl Stellar Season ends with First WPRC Team Roping Heeling World Title

By Jolee Lautaret Jordan

Annette Stahl can't remember the first time she threw a rope. Growing up in the south-central New Mexico community of Tularosa, the cowgirl was born into a family of ropers.

"I guess I just always had a rope in my hand instead of some other toy," she laughs. The Hinkles, Don, Edna Kay and daughters Jackie and Annette, roped together as a family when the girls were young; both her parents and Annette still actively compete today.

In fact, Stahl just captured her first WPRC World Championship and is widely regarded as the best female heeler in the country.

"You can't ask for a better partner than that one," says 2014 WPRC All Around Champion Lari Dee Guy of Stahl, who is rated a #6 Elite in the USTRC.

"Annette is the greatest girl heeler there's ever been—bar none—ever," says thirteen-time WPRC World Champ Jackie Hobbs-Crawford.

"I appreciate them so much," says the ever humble Stahl, noting that she appreciates the opportunity to rope with both cowgirls. "I look up to the two of them; they are great athletes and ropers and they are great people too."

In fact, both top cowgirls had a hand in Stahl's stellar season in 2014.

Guy persuaded Stahl to buy her WPRC card in 2013 so the pair could rope together at the WPRC World Finals. Unfortunately, Stahl didn't join until later in the season, missing out on about $8,000 in earnings at the Wildfire Ladies Open roping in February.

"I wanted to make sure I didn't make that mistake twice," Stahl notes.

Enter Hobbs-Crawford, one of Stahl's partners in Salado, where the Wildfire is held each February. It is one of the top stops for lady ropers all season. With a guaranteed paycheck of $25,000 to the winning team, it annually draws the best ropers.

For Stahl in particular, it made good sense to get her WPRC dues paid before the Wildfire in 2014. In the 15 years that the roping has been held, she has been the champion four different times: 2006 with Macklee Austin, 2012 with Beverly Robbins and twice with Hobbs-Crawford which included 2014 when the pair beat out 265 teams over a four-head average to earn $12,720 each.

“The Wildfire put me ahead by a ways [for the World title],” says Stahl, who also won with Hobbs-Crawford in 2011 back when she was known as Annette Hinkle. She has since married rancher, and roper, C.R. Stahl and moved to the West Texas community of Salt Flat. “I like it; it’s been good to me. I’ve been very blessed there.”

“I don’t know what the difference is,” says Stahl when asked her secret to winning in Salado. “I just always figure if you rope all your cattle by two feet then you have a pretty good chance to win.”

Stahl seized control of the WPRA World standings with the win in Salado and added big paydays at Groesbeck and Hamilton (Texas) in early summer to solidify her position.

With the 2014 WPRA World Finals set to kick off in Waco, Texas on October 23-26 at the Extraco Event Center, Stahl held an insurmountable lead of $8,500 over her closest competitors.

“It was the complete opposite of last year,” notes Stahl. “Lari Dee had the heading won before the Finals and I couldn’t win enough to move up from second. This year, I had the title won and Lari Dee couldn’t catch Jackie.”

“Basically, it was the same circumstances with nothing really to lose or win except all the money we could win in the go’s and the average. Our goal was to knock all four steers down as fast as we could.”

Guy and Stahl started the Finals off hot with a go round win. Their 6.4 second run netted them $555. Though they didn’t place again until the final round, they did win the round with a rodeo best 6.2 seconds and collected another $555. They finished fourth in the average for another $536 check.

Stahl ended the season with $18,202, well ahead of Reserve Champ Kelly Hicks’ $7,895.

Stahl and Guy also won the 2015 Kick-Off event, banking $679 toward a repeat title next season. Stahl even added some breakaway money, though she says she hasn’t “seriously competed” in that event in better than a decade.

“I appreciate the WPRA for putting on an event to support women in this sport and their sponsors as well,” says Stahl, who also added thanks to her own sponsors, Cactus Ropes and Cactus Gear, Circle S Feed and Supply and 5 Star Saddle Pads.

“Heelers are nothing without a header and I have been blessed with the best,” she added, noting her primary partners in the WPRA this season were Guy and Hobbs-Crawford. “A great header makes a heeler’s job a lot easier.”

“Everyone supports me . . . my husband, my family,” she adds. “I especially thank God for allowing me to have the talent to do what I love to do.”
